EMERALDS

"Although we enjoy looking at plants and leaves, we regard emeralds with all the more pleasure because, compared with them, there is nothing more intensely green," wrote Roman philosopher Pliny the Elder in the first century C.E. Today, this verdant gemstone is still celebrated for the lushness of its color. In Nina Ramsdorf's drop earrings and Piaget's Magical Aurora necklace, emeralds take on a teal glow, while the oversized pear-cut stone in Boghossian's ring has a distinctly grassy hue. The 169.2 carats of cabochons in Chopard's bracelet have a shamrockesque intensity, but the line of diagonally set emeralds in Fernando Jorge's yellow gold necklace have an altogether juicier, more apple-like appeal. is

BULGARI OCTO ROMA WORLDTIMER
Swiss watch brand Bulgari makes owning a world timer a real possibility thanks to the Octo Roma Worldtimer crafted in stainless steel. Powered by a new 261-part integrated movement developed in-house, the watch is ultra-thin and comfortable on the wrist. The hours, minutes and seconds are in the center, with two chapter rings surrounding it, one each for the 24-hour display and the world's main cities. The brand's watchmakers avoid a few cities representative of their time zones that are atypical, including Rome (spelled Roma for the name of the watch) instead of Paris. The watch features a transparent sapphire case back for viewing the movement.

PATEK PHILIPPE REF. 5230G WORLD TIME
Always insisting on aesthetics and readability, Patek Philippe does not disappoint with its Ref. 5230G World Time Watch. Crafted in 18-karat white gold with a hand-painted, hand-gilded center dial in charcoal, this 38.5mm watch is highly coveted by collectors because of its design ethos and wearability. It is powered by an in-house-made self-winding movement with 230 parts and 48 hours of power reserve. The caliber 240 HU holds two patents and boasts a Spiromax® balance spring and Gyromax® balance. It carries the Patek Philippe Seal.
$52,040, patek.com

IWC TOP GUN PILOT'S WATCH TIMEZONER
Brand new to the IWC Schaffhausen lineup, this Top Gun Pilot's Watch Timezoner is crafted in the brand's proprietary, high-tech Ceratanium (a mix of titanium and ceramic) for lightness and scratch resistance) with a city bezel ring made of ceramic. The world time is adjusted simply by pushing down on the bezel. This marks the first time a Top Gun Pilot's watch boasts this complication. It is powered by an in-house-made IWC movement with Pellaton winding system. Just 150 pieces will be made per year.

CHOPARD L.U.C. TIME TRAVELER ONE
Turning to a monochromatic color scheme for its L.U.C. Time Traveler One watch, Chopard creates this world timer in a limited edition of 250 pieces in ceramicized grade 5 titanium. The 42mm watch features titanium crowns (reinforced with ceramic) that enable the wearer to change the city ring. This watch boasts an inner ring that indicates the date. It is powered by a manufacture-made L.U.C. mechanical movement, with automatic winding and 291 individual components, that is a COSC-certified chronometer. A transparent sapphire caseback allows for viewing of the movement.

The Birth of Chopard.

"With a one-of-a-kind stone like this one, we have to find a way to make it the star of the show."
CAROLINE SCHAFFNER, CHOPARD

Emeralds are a particular point of focus for the brand, which gives them pride of place in its high jewelry designs. "We don't really have a larger emerald, my priority is to cut the stone in a way that takes advantage of its size. Each [stone] possesses an individual story and structure [called] a garden, a finger print of veins and inclusions that make them unique," she continued.

In the 2021 Bell Corvet Collection unveiled at the Cannes Film Festival under the "Horndie" theme, impressive specimens included a 622-carat cabochon on a brooch and a 18.29-carat round shape on a necklace.

The Chopard Insofu emerald will be the highlight of the "Exceptional Gemstones" presentation at its Paris Fashion Week, where the jeweler will showcase an assortment of 20 exceptionally pure gemstones. Its design is still loose—a first for the house.

Among those will be some emeralds, of course, but also an uncut sapphire of 21.04 carats, an also-uncut pigeon blood ruby cut in a pear shape, found in Mozambique, and a 31.3-carat fancy dark gray-greenish-yellow "diamond" diamond, which has the unusual ability to change color depending on light and heat exposure.

Completed designs will showcase the house's show of revealing the natural radiance of gems, without superfluous ornament or embellishment, according to Schaffner.

Other rarities are a black Alexandrite pearl with striking blue and green overtones, and a vibrant cognac parula turmaline. "This exhibition will be the first of several highlights for Chopard this year. Coming up next is a celebration of its 25th anniversary as Cartier's official partner, which Schaffner aims to satisfy the house's clients' appetite for something that hasn't been done before, something surprising to top last year's "scape into a beautiful imaginary world—that was a response to clients' orish desire for the rare and precious.

Also slated for 2022 is the renovation of Chopard's New York flagship store, which will be pulled to the reveal of a new high jewelry collection. The house will leave the 719 Madison Avenue address, which occupied for 83 years and move into a new 2,400-square-foot home in the City Hall building at the corner of 25th Street and Fifth Avenue.

Chopard Reveals Raw Emerald Called 'Insofu'

The 6,225-carat stone is the second-largest emerald discovered at Jaeger and will be the highlight of the "Exceptional Gemstones" showcase during Paris Couture Week.

IN LAY DISPOSITION
Continuing on its mission of sourcing exceptional stones in a responsible and sustainable way, Chopard will unveil a 6,225-carat raw emerald during the high jewelry presentation coinciding with Haute Couture Week here. The emerald, named Chopard Insofu, weighs 1.22 kilograms—roughly the same as a Champagne bottle—and was found in the open-air Jaeger mine in Zambia by Gemfields, a leading supplier of responsibly sourced colored gemstones.

"I was given its name after the word 'sophisticated' in the Swahili language speaks in the region around the mine, for its size and its shape evoking the mine's trunk. The Chopard Insofu is among the largest emeralds ever found in the world, and the second-largest emerald ever found in Jaeger, picking between the 5,695-carat Ino-Ama (or "Ino") and the recently unearthed 7,825-carat Chopard Ino ("Ino-Ama"). Still in its raw state, the sizable emerald has not yet revealed its secret, but it has already been described as "extraordinary alive," with experts leading its purity and size.

"The size and quality of the crystal make it a raw find indeed," noted Sean Gilbertson, director of Gemfields, noting that it was also "setting a historic milestone for traceability back to the mine of origin, a holy grail for consumers" seeking reassurance on the credentials of their resources in the first emerald of this size and purity to meet traceability requirements.

"By purchasing a raw stone, we are able to follow its entire journey through to final creation. Chopard will cut the raw emerald and collect all the cut gems emerging from it. This ensures a complete chain of traceability, which is rare for such stones," said Chopard's vice president and artistic director Caroline Schaffner who noted that a "fully integrated supply chain" was what made "these resources of nature available to our clientele," who despite the COVID-19 pandemic had shown "strong resilience and loyalty" in the house.

She recalled her feeling on the discovery of the Insofu emerald as "uncovering any emotion I'd ever known." "Despite its excitement at this project, which "a passionate gem-lover like her dreams of," she expressed caution, noting that while "plans are underway to make a collection out of the stone), a rough emerald holds many mysteries" and that the process was just beginning.

"With a one-of-a-kind stone like this one, we have to find a way to make it the star of the show. In this case, we will start with what reveals the cut, and build the surrounding design that best complements them," she said in an email interview.

Chopard L.U.C.XP Urushi year of the Tiger watch

Turning to the ancient Japanese art of Urushi lacquer to create its superb Chinese zodiac watches, Chopard's rendition of the tiger in the newest L.U.C.XP Urushi year of the Tiger watch is superb. Created in 18-karat ethical rose gold, the watch depicts the tiger in the foreground with water and the mountains in the background. The alluring dial is created using sap that has been tapped from the Urushi trees (only once every year) and then left to temper, and steep into a hard lacquer over the course of many months. The master artisan then works with the lacquer to hand paint each and every dial of the 88-piece limited edition. In this year's zodiac watch, the tiger stands in all his majesty, looking back behind him to the forest, with the water below. His coat is a beautiful blend of golden hues with black stripes and his bright green eye captures attention. His tongue is created in a realistic rose instead of a bold red and his fangs are gold. Powered by the L.U.C. 96.17-L movement, the ultra-thin watch is created in a limited edition of just 88 pieces.

The Roman house of Bulgari is inspired by its rich jewelry roots and remains true to women with its round Diva watches. The newest versions in 2021 were in the Libra collection and offer a grand mosaic of diamonds and gemstones set into the dials and cases. One of the versions is the newest 37mm 18-karat white gold Diva Mosaica Minute Repeater that is entirely set with 686 brilliant- and baguette-cut diamonds weighing 11.6 carats. Each stone is individually set by hand over the course of hundreds of hours of craftsmanship. The repeater watch houses a mechanical movement that chimes the time on the hour, the quarter hours and the minutes past the quarter hours. The watch is finished with a blue cabochon-cut sapphire for the crown and a blue alligator strap.

SAN FRANCISCO — FEBRUARY 10: A Sumatran tiger named Leanne plays near the pieces of a Chinese Lunar ... [+] GETTY IMAGES

This year, the Lunar New Year 2022 roars onto the scene on February 1 and many zodiac-loving people will be pouncing on the newest sign: Year of the Tiger. One of the most beloved of the 12 Chinese Zodiac signs, the Tiger signifies fortune and confidence. According to Chinese culture, the king of the jungle is not only beautiful, but also powerful and people born under this sign are said to possess confidence, ambition and courage. They are also known to have an innate sense of justice. Every year, top watch brands around the world embrace the newest Chinese zodiac sign, reinterpreting it using a host of Métiers d'arts, for wear on the wrist. Here we present one of the most comprehensive looks at the Year of the Tiger watches you will want strapped to your wrist. (In fact, it is such a long list that we are creating it in two parts. Look for Part 2 on Monday January 10.)

VINTAGE WATCHES The 1970s Lead The Way With Rolex Sport Icons, A Lip Chronograph, and A Chopard Dual Time

And it does not stop there; check out everything in this week's vintage drop now.

1970s Chopard Dual Time In 18k Yellow Gold

BY SAORI OMURA

This Chopard Dual Time watch is an amazing object, period. "Restrained opulence" would be the right words to describe this piece. It's gold, it's big, and it's heavy (almost 100 grams!), but somehow it appears understated at the same time because of its soft, matte golden glow. I've talked about integrated bracelet watches from this period in the past, but the construction of this one is a direct reflection of the strengths that come from a long line of expertise in jewelry. The meticulous fine bark textured finish found throughout the case and bracelet truly come together as one; it's so smooth and so comfortable. When the bracelet is laid out on a flat surface, it reminds me of the famous yellow brick road from The Wizard of Oz. One of the common issues with these types of bracelets is that they can become warped or small sections can slightly lift up to resemble fish scales - but this example is in pristine condition. The bracelet also appears to have remained in its entire, full length which is certainly a plus.

1970s Chopard Dual Time In 18k Yellow Gold
$5,900

Fitted with two mechanical movements, the dual time function on this Chopard is straightforward with a reference for local and home time. Especially during the pandemic when traveling has been limited, having a beautiful dual time watch feels like there could be a fresh sense of optimism for freedom of movement right around the corner. It's a love-it-or-hate-it watch, and it's honestly out of my comfort zone, but it has surprisingly grown on me.

1970s Chopard Dual Time In 18k Yellow Gold

Sometimes, it's the unexpected choices that bring you unexpected joy. Here's to a new year with a new mindset - I say "Yes" to this Chopard.

Happy Chinese New Year Of The Tiger 2022 With 8 Auspicious Big Cats Featuring On Wristwatches

by Elizabeth Doerr

恭喜发财 / 恭喜發財 (Gōngxǐ fācái)

It is now a tradition for watchmakers to observe Chinese New Year by creating beautiful, decorative, limited edition timepieces adorned with symbolic depictions of the appropriate sign of the Chinese zodiac – often using rare, artistic techniques paying tribute to the eastern calendar.

The Year of the Tiger – which is the third animal in the 12-year zodiac cycle – begins on February 1, 2022.

Contrary to the western Gregorian calendar, which uses the solar day as its base unit, the traditional Chinese calendar is lunisolar, meaning it uses a solar calendar with the lunar cycle (29.53059 days) as its base unit.

Since one year comprising 12 lunar months (354.36707 days) is approximately 11 days too short compared with the solar year (365.242374 days), a leap month is sometimes added. As each month of the Chinese calendar (including leap months) begins on the day of new moon, its length is either 29 or 30 days.

This means that when a year includes a leap month, it will be a 13-month year, while a year comprising 12 lunar months is shorter than the solar year.

This is the reason behind the variable date of Chinese New Year.

To celebrate the event, high-end manufacturers have created special editions depicting some form of the regal tiger. Let's have a look at eight of them.

Chopard L.U.C.XP Urushi Year of the Tiger

The annual Chopard L.U.C.XP horological tribute to Chinese New Year combines arts, crafts, ideology, and technology originating in Switzerland, China, and Japan. Chopard Manufacture's L.U.C.XP model with its ultra-thin movement, Japanese expertise in lacquer, and China's zodiacal symbolism. The Swiss brand has been releasing these delicious editions based on the ultra-thin L.U.C.XP since 2013.

Chopard L.U.C.XP Urushi Year of the Tiger

For the urushi lacquer artwork Chopard cooperated with Yamada Heiando, a workshop founded in 1919 that counts the Japanese emperor and his family among its loyal customers. The master lacquer artist in charge of this particular work was Minoru Koizumi, and he needs 150 hours to complete each dial.

This gold-based dial contains several special elements, starting and ending with the Maki-e technique, which sees gold flakes captured between the layers of lacquer from the Toxicodendron vernicifluum (Chinese lacquer) tree. Here they light up the "sterile" background against which we find a tiger perched above a bay surrounded by cliffs.

For Jewelry at Couture Week, Challenges Can Lead to Innovation

Creations from Boucheron, Cartier and others embrace noteworthy trends, including transformable designs and materials like titanium.

By Tina Isaac-Goizé
Jan. 24, 2022

Houses such as Cartier, De Beers, Boucheron, Dior and Louis Vuitton have been holding appointment-only viewings for clients and press to see their collections this week. And while some lines are limited to a handful of parures, there are firsts among the debuts as well as several notable transformable jewels, a trend in high jewelry that continues to grow.

The classic Happy Sport concept, inspired by drops of water splashing from a waterfall, has been around since the 1970s. It involves setting diamonds in gold bezels and placing them between two sapphire crystals where they float freely with the movement of the wrist, catching the light as they move around the dial. This red-hot version positions seven diamonds in front of a textured mother of pearl dial in an 18-karat rose gold case with an automatic movement.

Named after the Bemba word for 'elephant', the Insofu rough emerald - an astonishing discovery totaling at 6,225 carats - was presented by Chopard in Paris. This rare stone that was found in the Kagem mine in Zambia is exceptional not only for its weight, but also for its quality. While not yet realized into many pieces of jewelry - like no doubt it will be - this stone shimmers with the possibilities, and Caroline Scheufele, co-President and Artistic Director of Chopard, plans to present each step of the way as this magnificent find is cut and honed into future designs. Chopard also presented several finished pieces in Paris, including a 10.88 carat 'Rose of Caroline' diamond set as a ring with rubies flanking it on either side.

WATCHTIME - USA'S NO. 1 WATCH MAGAZINE / WATCHES / CHOPARD BLENDS TITANIUM AND ETHICAL GOLD IN ITS LATEST ALPINE EAGLE XL CHRONO

Chopard Blends Titanium and Ethical Gold in its Latest Alpine Eagle XL Chrono

Written by Mark Bernardo
January 7, 2022

f t in

Chopard launched an "extra-large" chronograph version of its sport-luxury Alpine Eagle model in 2020, consisting of two references with cases and bracelets in Lucent steel and a third in a bi-material execution combining Lucent steel and the maison's "ethical" rose gold. For the latest iteration of the Alpine Eagle XL Chrono, released at the end of 2021, Chopard once again offers a two-tone, bi-material timepiece, this one pairing its ethical gold with ceramized titanium and mounted on a new calfkin leather strap.

Like its predecessors, the watch has an "XL" 44-mm case with right-side-mounted chronograph pushers that are elegantly integrated on either side of the crown guards. The gold used for the bezel, crown, pushers and caseback is sourced from the ethical supply chain that Chopard famously established in 2018, and the bead-blasted ceramized titanium used for crown guards and caseback, a material used in the aerospace, automotive, and medical industries, boasts exceptional hardness (700 Vickers), friction and corrosion resistance, and biocompatibility. The material, which Chopard also showcased in a pair of L.U.C. travel watches earlier in 2021, derived from an electrosplasma technology that oxidizes surface layers of titanium at extreme temperatures. The gold bezel features eight functional indexed screws at the key points, and the crown sports an engraved compass rose.

The textured-motif dials, inspired by the visual of an eagle's iris, are in Chopard's recently unveiled "Pitch Black" color, which was developed to represent "the intense blackness of mountain nights" and serve as a reminder of how urbanization and man-made lighting have disrupted the natural beauty of Alpine vistas. The seconds hand features the hallmark counterweight shaped like an eagle feather and the black counters at 3, 6, and 9 o'clock — for 30 chronograph minutes, running seconds, and 12 chronograph hours, respectively — have been designed for optimum legibility of their readouts. Surrounding the tricompass dial is an inner bezel ring with a tachymeter scale, highlighted at the 100, 160, and 240 markers with red detailing. The motif is echoed on the hands linked to the chronograph function, which have contrasting red inlays.

The L.U.C. Full Strike 'Día de los Muertos' celebrates Mexican culture and tradition.

Durante los tres días se realizaron múltiples presentaciones de nuevas piezas, algunas únicas y otras de edición limitada. Tal fue el caso de Chopard, que festejó el 25º aniversario de la creación de Louis-Ulysse Chopard, L.U.C., y exhibió uno de sus relojes más exquisitos: El L.U.C. Full Strike 'Día de los Muertos', que, limitado a una pieza, celebra la cultura y tradición mexicana.

El guardatiempos referido está fabricado en oro blanco de 18 quilates, completamente grabado a mano en todo el conjunto de la caja. Su esfera, adornada con una emblemática calavera, es una interpretación única del modelo de repetición de minutos, con los martillos visibles en uno de los ojos, y el regulador de inercia – que define el ritmo de la sonería – integrado en el bigote. El segundo ojo hace las veces del indicador concéntrico de la reserva de la marcha (de 60 horas).

El corazón del L.U.C. Full Strike 'Día de los Muertos' late al ritmo del movimiento L.U.C. 08.01-L, con el que Chopard sigue dando testimonio sobre su dominio del mecanismo de repetición de minutos.

Bulgari, por su parte, presentó una exposición pop-up donde lució todos los modelos de la colección Octo Finissimo, con la que, por séptimo año consecutivo, batió los récords mundiales entre los relojes ultradelgados, gracias al diseño italiano y proezas mecánicas con las que cuenta.

During the three days there were multiple presentations of new pieces, some unique and others limited edition. Such was the case of Chopard, that celebrated the 25th anniversary of the creation of Louis-Ulysse Chopard, L.U.C., and exhibited one of its most exquisite watches: The L.U.C. Full Strike 'Día de los Muertos', which, limited to one piece, celebrates Mexican culture and tradition.

The referred timepiece is made of 18-carat white gold, completely hand-engraved all over the case. Its dial, adorned with an emblematic skull, is a unique interpretation of the minute repeater model, with the hammers visible in one of the eyes, and the inertia regulator – which defines the rhythm of the chime – integrated into the mustache. The second eye serves as the concentric power reserve indicator (60 hours).

The heart of the L.U.C. Full Strike 'Día de los Muertos' beats to the rhythm of the L.U.C. 08.01-L movement with which Chopard continues to testify to its mastery of the minute repeater mechanisms.

Bulgari presented a pop-up exhibition where he wore all the models of the Octo Finissimo collection, with which, for the seventh consecutive year, broke world records among ultra-thin watches, thanks to its Italian design and mechanical prowess.

Aquellos que conocen de relojes deportivos ya estarán familiarizados con el Alpine Eagle, de Chopard. Presentado en 2019, es un sucesor directo de la atractiva línea de relojes deportivos Chopard St. Moritz, que vio la luz por primera vez en 1980.

Así como el dial negro del XL Chrono tiene un fundamento, también lo tiene el Alpine Eagle Frozen. Kari-Friedrich Scheufele lo describe así: "El Alpine Eagle Frozen se inspira directamente en los glaciares alpinos y la forma en que reflejan brillantemente la luz del sol. Cada diamante utilizado en este reloj brilla como un copo de nieve que se ha posado en las cimas de las montañas".

Hoy nos centramos en dos modelos; el Chrono XL de 44 mm y el Alpine Eagle Frozen de 41 mm. La colección Alpine Eagle es la interpretación del siglo XXI de Kari-Fritz Scheufele de la línea St. Moritz. Kari-Fritz es el miembro más joven de la familia Scheufele, propietaria de Chopard.

Este cronómetro de alta precisión cuenta con una caja bimetálica elaborada con oro ético y titanio ceramizado, integra una correa de piel de becerro, aunque también está disponible con una correa de titanio integrada.

El titanio ceramizado agrega una capa de cerámica resistente a los arañazos en su superficie, lo que le da al titanio un aspecto y un acabado más brillantes. Chopard alaba el uso de titanio y oro ceramizados como novedad en la relojería.

Neomatik Datum

TAG Heuer es una marca con una historia arraigada en el automovilismo. Modelos como el Carrera, Autavia y Monaco han sido usados por los más grandes estrellas de la conducción de los siglos XX y XXI. Para celebrar su relación de cuatro años con Aston Martin Red Bull Racing, TAG Heuer ha lanzado un reloj para celebrar al cuatro veces campeón de pilotos y constructores de F1. Se ha desarrollado un cronógrafo de 43 mm en colaboración con el equipo de F1 y presenta los colores del equipo azul, rojo y amarillo en el bisel, la escala taquíométrica y los contadores del cronógrafo. Impulsado por cuarzo y equipado con un brazalete de acero, el fondo de caja está grabado con el logo del equipo Aston Martin Red Bull Racing.

Como socio de la carrera de ruta italiana Mille Miglia durante 32 años, en 2019 Chopard lanzó el GTS Power Control de edición limitada inspirado en el mundo de los autos clásicos. Solo se fabricaron 500 ejemplares del modelo de acero de 43 mm (también disponible en una versión de dos tonos), que tiene un movimiento automático certificado por COSC. La esfera, el bisel de aluminio y la correa de piel de becerro perforada son de un color azul intenso, más común en los coches de carreras de mediados del siglo XX. Las señales de carreras clásicas incluyen una reserva de marcha que se asemeja al indicador de un indicador de combustible, una ventana de fecha con el logotipo de Mille Miglia y un fondo de caja de cristal de zafiro con la inscripción "Brescia-Roma-Brescia".

Diseñado con el diseñador industrial alemán Werner Aisslinger (también un destacado entusiasta de los automóviles), la Autobahn es lo que sucede cuando Nomos toma una foto en la esfera del reloj inspirada en el indicador del automóvil. El resultado presenta una pista de luz que se extiende desde las ocho en punto hasta las cuatro en punto, lo que hace que parezca un velocímetro iluminado. Además, la función de fecha a las seis en punto pretende parecerse a un odómetro, con la ventana mostrando tres fechas a la vez. Los coches y los relojes encajan de forma natural. Ambos son tradicionalmente mecánicos, y ambos son productos de ingeniería alucinantemente compleja y precisa. Incluso mirando más allá de las similitudes en la ingeniería y el diseño, el reloj en sí mismo ha desempeñado un papel integral en las primeras carreras.

Iconic jeweler Chopard moves to new "Luxury Lane" Vancouver location

Caesura.Git | Oct 15 2021, 11:00 am

Chopard is soon to have a new home in Vancouver.

The Swiss watch maker and jeweler has moved to downtown's Alberni Street, otherwise known as "luxury lane," opening on Dec. 21.

The stunning new location, previously occupied by contemporary retailer Blubird, will showcase the 161 year old brands' timeless classics, and iconic watches in the 743 square foot boutique. With wood floors and luxe furnishings, the bright and airy space is an escape from the busy downtown core.

A facade of the new Chopard store on Alberni Street, opening Dec. 21.

The store will also include appointments for the back of the boutique, featuring an exclusive library. The new space is a decidedly masculine one with rich shades of leather to display their L.U.C., Mille Miglia, and Alpine Eagle collections.

"Chopard is proud to unveil a beautiful jewel in Vancouver," said Caroline Schaeffler, Co-President and Artistic Director of Chopard.

"We've been welcomed with open arms and remain committed to this important, growing and vibrant market in Canada. We look forward to welcoming friends of the Maison to our new home, one that embodies and advances the creativity, innovation and craftsmanship that Chopard is known for," she also said.

Chopard's Happy Diamonds collection.

Chopard is a feature on Hollywood red carpets, worn by models like Angelina Jolie, M.I.A., and Olivia Colman at the Oscars in Feb. 2021.

The brand is also known for their celebrity-fronted campaigns, including a recent one with Julia Roberts. The Pretty Woman star appeared in a short film directed by Karim Dahan to promote the collection, which part of Chopard's Happy Diamonds line.

It was established with the company back in 1857 for her own line. Added the watchmaker's (CHOPARD) The Swiss watchmaker's popular collection can be seen in the brand's entrance its edge side with a easy campaign featuring the brand's in the pieces.

The brand's Happy Diamonds Collection has been a popular luxury accessory with the younger and forward gears.

The new location joins Chopard near other luxury jewelers and watch retailers, including Tiffany & Co., Van Cleef & Arpels, Bvlgari and more, which all operate on the same street. Alberni is also home to a Prada boutique and a Burberry store, which is housed inside the Strangelife retail.

Chopard initially opened their first Vancouver boutique in 2017 on West Georgia St.

The product: Luxury brand sets up shop on Alberni Street.

"We opened our first boutique in 2017 and have been welcomed with open arms ever since," Caroline Scheufele, the co-president and artistic director of Chopard, says. "Not only is Vancouver one of the world's leading destinations for luxury, but the community also has a deep appreciation for craftsmanship, innovation, creativity, and also importantly, sustainability."

"It has been a wonderful place to call home, which is very important to Chopard as a family-owned Maison."

The company's new expanded location at 1108 Alberni St. — which Scheufele calls "one of Vancouver's most coveted shopping destinations" — features 743 square feet of shopping in a space that's designed to "reflect the feeling of a family home," according to the company.

In addition to pieces from iconic Chopard collections such as L'Heure du Diamant, Happy Diamonds, and Ice Cube, the boutique will be home to some high jewelry selects from the Swiss luxury brand.

"To be able to bring some of these pieces into our Vancouver boutique is very special," Scheufele says of the high jewelry designs. "We've also designed an intimate and exclusive gentlemen's area where customers are able to discover the world of Chopard Haute Horlogerie through our technical watch collections including L.U.C, Mille Miglia and Alpine Eagle.

"And last but not least, a large collection of fine accessories including leather goods, writing instruments, sunglasses as well as exclusive fragrances complete the shopping experience."

THE IT LIST

A rendering of new Chopard boutique on Alberni St. CHOPARD

The product: Chopard sets up shop on Alberni Street.

Why we love it: Swiss watch and fine jewelry brand Chopard has relocated to a new boutique slated to open on Dec. 21.

"We opened our first boutique in 2017 and have been welcomed with open arms ever since," Caroline Scheufele, the co-president and artistic director of Chopard, says. "Not only is Vancouver one of the world's leading destinations for luxury, but the community also has a deep appreciation for craftsmanship, innovation, creativity, and also importantly, sustainability.

"It has been a wonderful place to call home, which is very important to Chopard as a family-owned Maison."

The company's new expanded location at 1108 Alberni St. — which Scheufele calls "one of Vancouver's most coveted shopping destinations" — features 743 square feet of shopping in a space that's designed to "reflect the feeling of a family home," according to the company.

In addition to pieces from iconic Chopard collections such as L'Heure du Diamant, Happy Diamonds, and Ice Cube, the boutique will be home to some high jewelry selects from the Swiss luxury brand.

"To be able to bring some of these pieces into our Vancouver boutique is very special," Scheufele says of the high jewelry designs. "We've also designed an intimate and exclusive gentlemen's area where customers are able to discover the world of Chopard Haute Horlogerie

Style news

This month, Italian fashion house Gucci is releasing the second edition of its partnership with American outdoor brand the North Face. Consisting of ready-to-wear clothing, accessories, luggage and shoes, the North Face x Gucci collection merges design elements of both brands in a playful way. Gucci's signature GG monogram has been adomed to bomber jackets, vests and reimagined styles from the 1970s and 1990s. The collection employs innovative fabrics including Econyl, a nylon fabric created using regenerated materials from scraps such as fishing nets and down that has been certified to the Responsible Down Standard by Control Union. It will be available at Gucci pop-up shops, select North Face stores and online. For more information, visit gucci.com.

Vancouver watch and jewellery aficionados have three new stores to explore. Swiss watchmaker Omega (omegawatches.com) has renovated and expanded its boutique at the Fairmont Hotel Vancouver. Housing signature timepiece collections including the Speedmaster, Seamaster and Constellation, as well as fine jewellery and sunglasses, the boutique includes lounge areas and a Champagne and coffee bar. On Alberni Street, Chopard (chopard.com) has opened its new boutique, which features the Swiss brand's high-jewellery collections and timepieces. And in Kitsilano, Mejuri (mejuri.com) has opened its first Vancouver store to showcase the Canadian brand's popular jewellery styles.

Swiss watch and jewellery brand Chopard has relocated its Vancouver storefront to 1108 Alberni Street in the city's Luxury Zone. The new storefront replaces a former location nearby at 925 West Georgia Street.

"Chopard is proud to unveil a beautiful jewel in Vancouver," said Caroline Scheufele, Co-President and Artistic Director of Chopard. "We've been welcomed with open arms and remain committed to this important, growing and vibrant market in Canada. We look forward to welcoming friends of the Maison to our new home, one that embodies and showcases the creativity, innovation and craftsmanship that Chopard is known for."

SHOPPING/VANCOUVER

Swiss watch and jewellery maison Chopard just opened an expanded, relocated Vancouver boutique last week.

Designed with a warm and welcoming atmosphere that expresses the timeless vision of Ms. Scheufele, the 743-square-foot boutique features light wood floors and wall paneling, luxurious fabrics and furnishings that artfully reflect the feeling of a family home.

Customers will discover a jewel box showcasing the Maison's timeless watch and jewellery collections that represent a sophisticated combination of refined craftsmanship, captivating aesthetics as well as a commitment to sustainable luxury.

Unique Haute Joaillerie and Precious Lace creations are joined by the brand's iconic L'Heure du Diamant, Happy Diamonds and Ice Cube collections.

"Chopard is proud to unveil a beautiful Jewel in Vancouver," said Caroline Scheufele, Co-President and Artistic Director of Chopard, adding "We look forward to welcoming friends of the Maison to our new home, one that embodies and showcases the creativity, innovation and craftsmanship that Chopard is known for."

An exclusive gentlemen's area at the back of the boutique is defined by rich shades of leather and an extensive library. Haute Horlogerie mixes the world of racing and classic automobiles through Chopard's technically sophisticated L.U.C., Mille Miglia and Alpine Eagle collections, inspired by a passion for excellence, innovation and expert craftsmanship, all part of Maison Chopard's mission since its founding in 1850.

WATCH WIND-UP: THE LATEST NEWS FROM ZENITH, CHOPARD AND OMEGA

by Daron Halajian | Jan 13, 2022 | Style, Watches

Zenith, Chopard and Omega lead the way with new product launches in today's news on the men's luxury watches front. Each of these pieces are quite distinct from one another. And they are sure to grab the attention of a wide array of collectors.

New men's luxury watches: Chopard L.U.C XP Urushi Year of the Tiger

Lastly, we have the Chopard L.U.C XP Urushi Year of the Tiger. It is limited to 88 pieces in an ethical 18-carat rose gold. A sign of earth and a recurrent emblem in Chinese artistic depictions, the tiger has long been associated with the figure of the emperor and state dignitaries.

Chopard

It symbolises fortune, wisdom, intelligence and creativity. Chopard is meticulous about its craft. And it truly strives to deliver luxury timepieces that are magnificent works of art. Staying true to its roots, Chopard works with the finest Japanese lacquer craftsmen who produce dials using the ancestral Urushi lacquer technique.

The 88 dials are produced in the workshop of century-old company Yamada Heiando. Using the Maki-e technique, gold flakes are placed between layers of lacquer made from the sap of the Toxicodendron vernicifluum tree.

Fine craftsmanship

These flakes light up the background featuring a tiger perched above a bay surrounded by cliffs, against a starlit background. The case of this timepiece is carved from an 18-carat rose gold source from an ethical supply chain. This work of craftsmanship is also ultra thin measuring at 6.80 mm thick.

It is powered by an in-house L.U.C 96.17-L movement providing a comfortable 65-hour power reserve. (Price available upon request)

The Smallest Flying Tourbillon Watches On Market

Featuring an ultra-thin case measuring just 7.47 millimetres, crafted in ethical 18-carat rose gold or platinum and fully set on the flanks, lugs, interlens spaces, crown and bezel, Chopard's new L.U.C. Flying T Twin Ladies watches measure 35 millimetres in diameter. Guided by a quest for balance and adapted to women's wrists, such proportions place these two creations among the smallest flying tourbillon watches on the market.

In 2018, Chopard Manufacture enriched its range of complications with its first automatic movement to house a flying tourbillon, L.U.C. 96.24-L. This calibre features Chopard's own high-gewalt case, jacked barrels and highly precise adjustments - including a stop-second function - now powers the two new L.U.C. Flying T Twin Ladies models available in either 18-carat rose gold or platinum-set platinum. Ultra-thin thanks to the slender movement case, these two timepieces feature a 35-millimetre diameter perfectly matched to women's wrists. Carefully refined both mechanically and aesthetically, these new 24-piece limited series reflect the soaring diversity displayed by the artisans of Geneva at Chopard Manufacture, as confirmed by the "Chronometer" and "Perpetual Calendar" certifications.

The flying tourbillon with which they are equipped plays a central role through a wide 6 o'clock opening providing a view through the movement. The lightness of the flying tourbillon is thus aimed to create an effect of transparency and lightness with the watch's casing is supplied by a sapphire crystal.

In the gold version, the tourbillon opening is cut out from a textured sector of pearl dust, adorned with four markers set with brilliant-cut diamonds - except at 12 o'clock, which is indicated by golden Arabic numerals.

The dial of the platinum version is richly set with a paving of 262 diamonds centred on the tourbillon carriage.

The case of the L.U.C. Flying T Twin Ladies houses the innovative L.U.C. calibre 96.24-L, Chopard Manufacture's first automatic movement with a flying tourbillon. A flying tourbillon is characterised by the absence of an upper bridge, held from below, it is naturally thinner and appears to be flying - hence its name. The L.U.C. 96.24-L calibre is only 3.30 mm thick, identical to that of the L.U.C. 96.61-L, Chopard Manufacture's first calibre created 25 years ago, of which it is an evolved version. Now representing a significant watch industry landmark, it retains its fundamental characteristics: the diameter, the 65-hour power reserve - driven by two stacked barrels using Chopard's own technology - and its automatic winding via a 22-carat gold micro-rotor. On the platinum version, the artisans go even so far as to add an ultimate touch of refinement by setting this micro-rotor with diamonds.

The L.U.C. 96.24-L movement is chronometer-certified and features a stop-second function, which is extremely rare on a tourbillon, enabling the time to be set with perfect precision.
